A Nation's Frugality.

Mr. CLEVELAND was happy in his THURMAN-banquet speech in his reference to "the bracing and wholesome atmosphere of uncomplaining frugality and economy" in which the moral and mental attributes of our people "have been firmly knit and invigorated." Before the great drama of 1861-'65 curtained off the past that was associated with Colonial and Revolutionary history our people knew and thought a vast deal more than they do now of "the patriot fathers." Tales of conflicts with the aborigines: traditions of heroism and suffering in the wilderness of the new world, and recollections of Revolutionary and 1812 soldiers were in every housebold then, but are forgotten now. In this age of luxury and money-making the farthest retrospect the average citigen cares to indulge in is the late war. Rarely powadays is a thought given to the courage and frugality which was required and possessed by the founders of this republic.

The war between the States, which impoverished the South and subjected us to hardships rivalling those suffered by the colonists in their resistance to Great Britain, brought to the North an era of rapid fortune-making, mammoth railway corporations, kings of the money-market, and luxuries of life before unknown. The simple habits of other days were swept away and will never return. So far as specially related to a community engaged in subduing a new country their return is not necessary or to be expected, but in tory matter. He does not wish incomevery other respect we might well desire to have them again.

Mr. CLEVELAND believes as we Democrats all do, "that our Government in its natural integrity is exactly suited to a to secure a thrifty government; and cheap and careful living on the part of make inroads upon the victim. individuals ought to enforce economy in the public expenditures."

only condemn but flippantly deride cheapness and economy within the homes of our people, and when the expendithe Government are reckless and wasteful," Mr. CLEVE-LAND declares, "we may be sure that something is wrong with us, and that a condition exists which calls for a vigorous and resentful defence of Americanism, by every man worthy to be called an American citizen." And just here he made a strong claim for the Democratic party as the party of the people-the plain people-and was justified in thinking that the noise of a recent political revolution had demonstrated that there is a point beyond which they cannot be led "by blind partisanship."

Throughout his speech Mr. CLEVE-LAND gave evidence of that sturdy mentality which makes him a great leader. The fight which he opened in his tariff message he continued in spirit if not in terms, and it must have been hard to tell at the banquet whether the venerable guest of the evening or the ex-President was more admired.

Of course Mr. CLEVELAND is in the field for the presidential nomination. If the tide of November 4th was impelled by the cause to which he ascribes it, it seems but natural that he should be our leader again, but we must study the field closely before coming to a determination. We cannot afford to risk everything on a whim of a New York faction. Perhaps, should Governor Hill be elected to the United Staes Senate, with a clear understanding that that is his full reward, the question will be easier of solution.

At any rate we are bound to give Mr. Cleveland our admiration, and to commend his efforts to recall the country to virtues which gave it its indepen- Sabbath. They refused to grant the dence and which alone can sustain it in the troubles to which heartless politicians and soulless speculators may sub-

Street Improvements.

The general voice of the community is for the inauguration of a system of street improvements commensurate with the progress the city is making in wealth and population.

We must keep all the old streets in good order and open new ones to reach | past year. out towards the suburbs. Hundreds of persons are known to be waiting for sidewalks, gutters, and curbings to be put upon their streets, and as soon as the work is done they will begin large building operations.

It will not do for us to say that we cannot meet their reasonable expectations, for we can. As well might a merchant declare that he cannot afford to keep in stock goods for which his customers are constantly calling, and which can be sold at a profit. What we can not afford is to chill enterprise. Enough of that has been done slready.

Let next year be memorable for a general improvement of streets and parks. It will pay. It will give a spur to building operations; employ thousands of mechanics, and provide a class of dwelling-houses now much needed. If 2200,000 could be set aside for spe-

But all these forms of tuberculosis can already be relieved by surgical and gienic measures at our disposal. It re-mains to be seen, therefore, whether Koch has really supplied us anything which will carry the treatment of tuberculosis any further than it already has been brought. One thing further, perhaps, he has achieved-viz., a method of prevention for those susceptible or exposed to the disease. This may be a gain, although the prevention of phthisis in individual cases is almost always possible if proper care is taken."

The first see Harrisburg the Washington sleeper was attached, and the train was due at Pittsburgh at 7:45. HOW IT OCCURRED.

The first section of the express is known as No. 9 and the second as No. 7. The first section was due at New Florence at 5:46 A. M., but it was 6:37 when the train reached that station. The was so dense that the engineer did not shooting at long range, inasmuch as the notice the red signal in the tower till Sabbath was constantly desecrated here after he had passed. He then slowed up in our midst by street-cars running and and went back for his orders. He then Sunday excursions, against which no pulled shead slowly. In the mean time resolution has been passed. However, the flagman of No. 9 had gone back to he would vote for this resolution. It was signal No. 7. According to the con-unantmously passed. Telegrams of greeting were received into the first within a minute and a half and the engineer of the second section saw his signals. The two passengers who were killed outright were asleep in their berths in the rear end of the car and never knew what hurt them. Twenty two passengers were in the car, most whom were congregated in and around the wash-room, in the front end of the
